Goodwill Makes Annual Report

A total of 199 persons were at work at the end of 1965, the annual report of the Wrightman Memorial Goodwill Industries of Long Beach shows.

The report, covering operations for 1965, has just been released by Walter L. Case, executive vice president of the local Goodwill branch.

Case said employment increased by 22 per cent over the 1964 report and added that $450,925 was paid in wages during the year. Many of the employees, unemployed at the beginning of the year, are now holding jobs in private industry, Case said. Labor turnover during the year was 100 per cent.

"Goodwill is about the only organization which tries to get better jobs for its best workers," Case commented. "Financed without subsidies, United Way assistance, or any other annual drive, Goodwill operates by turning repairable castoffs into salable merchandise, which is then retailed in Goodwill Stores.

All expenses and other financial obligations of Goodwill are met through sales of merchandise in the Goodwill Stores. Income is used to pay wages and rehabilitation ex-

It will be held at 8 p.m. in the THS auditorium. No admission will be charged at this performance. The public is invited.

Meadow Park Class Gets Preview of New TV Show

A chance to be spokesmen for "all the children of the United States and Canada" highlighted what was to be a routine study trip to Columbia Broadcasting Studios for 7 Torrance fifth and sixth grade children.

The youngsters, students at Meadow Park Elementary school who are studying forms of modern communication, were detoured into the program Analysis viewing room to preview a pilot film.

CBS has only five openings for new programs in the coming season, according to Jack Smith, studio representative. For these spots, 26 programs are being considered. Whenever such a show is to fit an early evening time slot, sponsors need the reaction of a child audience. Computer scoring of their minute-by-minute reaction is made possible by use of push buttons at each chair.

The Torrance children, all avid viewers, were asked to compare the film they watched with popular current shows. The pilot film was tentatively titled "Penelope Beware." Reactions were being evaluated in New York City, only 20 minutes after the showing.

The children, however, were still touring the local studios, asking questions about the multiple color cameras and vast lighting equipment, talking with Wally Cox, and peering at scenery, wardrobe, and makeup departments.

Students usually have two such trips each school year to coordinate their classroom learning with actual field experiences.
